WARNING: THIS PRESS RELEASE CONTAINS NERDITY AND NON-TECHNICAL COMPUTER LINGO

The inevitable Beetle infestation has finally arrived in Denver. No, not the kind that devours helpless pine trees, or the kind that draws crowds of screaming teenage girls (at least not yet). No, this is a gleaming armada of nerdy red Volkswagon Beetles that has snaked its way across Canada and entered the US conquering one city after another, wiping out all the confusing techno-babble that happens to get in their way. Each Beetle is driven by a laptop toting, duct tape spectacled, fully pocket-protected computer EntrepreNerd whose only desire is to rid the world of all its computer problems.

Yes, Nerds On Site has arrived in Denver. Don't let their nerdy appearance fool you though. This crew is dead serious and well armed to contend with any computer problem you can throw at them, whether you're a business whose network is acting up, or just sitting at home trying to get your favourite game to work properly. All you need to do to get their attention is to call their toll free number, 1-877-MY NERDS, and let them know you need help. A nerd will return your call within 3 hours to arrange a visit. It's as simple as that.

When a new call comes in all the Denver nerds are alerted and the nerd most suitable in terms of current location and expertise, will call the client back.. Before we even come to your place, we quote you a flat cost - we don't use hourly rates. We have a no-fix, no-charge policy. If we can't fix it, you don't pay a cent! And the nerdiest of things is that we're all equipped to communicate with each other at all times, so you don't get just one nerd to deal with your issue, you get the entire NERD-force along with all of their training, expertise and competencies.

Invasion of the nerds

A mobile force of computer geeks -- make that nerds -- has moved into Denver. Nerds on Site offers technical service on the go. Its independent contractors travel in bright red Volkswagen Beetles. Since the company's founding in Canada in 1995, Nerds on Site has expanded to six countries.

Carl Frank, a self-described "entrepreneur" from south Denver, is alone so far among the Nerds on Site troops in the Denver area, although the company intends to recruit more people to serve frustrated metro area computer users. The company charges a flat rate instead of an hourly fee, but doesn't charge anything if its nerds can't fix the problem.
